

Aonic Complete — Voice-of-Customer Dossier

Product: Aonic Complete (daily foundational supplement) — <https://aoniclife.com/products/aonic-complete> Methodology: Mixed-source voice-of-customer mining across Reddit-equivalent forums (Mumsnet, Patient.info, HealthUnlocked, LongeCity, BobIsTheOilGuy, BodyBuilding.com), Amazon and Trustpilot reviews, brand testimonial pages, journalist-quoted experts (Boston Globe, Fortune, Inc., NY Magazine, McGill OSS), TikTok creator content, dietitian roundups, Bryan Johnson's public AG1 takedown, AG1's own customer-review page, class-action filings, and 30+ named bloggers who reviewed AG1 / Ritual / Huel / Bloom / Live It Up / Thorne / Centrum / One A Day / Garden of Life / Organifi / Naked Greens / Care-of long-form.

A note on Reddit: Direct `reddit.com` fetches were blocked in this environment. Where Reddit voice appears below, it is sourced via (a) named aggregator articles that quote Reddit users with subreddit + username + date attribution, or (b) Reddit-equivalent demographic forums (Mumsnet for Chloe, BobIsTheOilGuy for older men, LongeCity for biohackers). Compositing was flagged where suspected. The underlying customer voice is real; some usernames may have been tidied by aggregators.

Total verbatim quotes captured across the four research streams: ~450, of which the ~250 most copy-actionable appear in this dossier.

0. PRODUCT REALITY ADDENDUM — read this first

Added after the original dossier was completed, sourced from the brand's own approved Product Book ("Aonic Complete — Messaging Highlights," JM-approved, Jan 13). This section supersedes any contradicting product detail elsewhere in this dossier.

0.1 Brand-approved product facts

- Brand-approved category descriptor: "Daily Essential Nutrition." Not "daily foundational supplement," not "daily multivitamin," not "greens powder." Aonic's preferred internal positioning is Daily Essential Nutrition (In One Beautiful On-The-Go Design).
- Brand-approved tagline: "Help fill your nutrition gaps with Aonic Complete — delivering 34 key ingredients at scientifically studied levels, no 'pixie-dusting,' to support overall health & well-being, immune support, and all-day performance."
- Format: On-the-go shot + capsules (dual-format). Patent-pending dual-chamber container per the offer brief.
- Two editions: HIS and HERS — different formulations, parallel funnels.
- Price: $115 / 30-day supply (subscription discount available). This is more than AG1's $79-$99/month — see correction in §0.4.
- Existing review baseline: 4.65 / 156 reviews (per offer brief — confirm before quoting in copy).

0.2 The four cornerstones of Daily Essential Nutrition (brand-approved frame)

Aonic Complete covers the four cornerstones of supplementation to support whole-body health:

1. Multivitamins & Minerals
2. Pre-, Pro- & Postbiotics
3. Omega 3
4. Superfoods & Greens

This four-cornerstone frame is the brand-approved structural argument. It is the spine of the product story and should be the spine of any long-form copy.

0.3 The six core benefits (brand-approved — HIS & HERS shared) + gender-variant benefits

Shared across both editions, with the specific ingredient stack each benefit is enabled by:

- 4-in-1 Daily Immune Support — Vitamin C, Vitamin D3, Zinc, Selenium
- Cellular Energy Support — high-potency B-complex, CoQ10, Iodine
- Smooth Digestion for Everyday Gut Health — 5g prebiotic fiber, 14 billion CFU probiotics, 450mg tributyrin (postbiotic)
- Supports Brain Health & Function — Omega-3 DHA, CoQ10, B-vitamins (NOTE: brand-approved phrasing is "Brain Health & Function" — never "focus")
- Healthier Skin, Hair, and Nails — Biotin, Vitamin A, Vitamin C, Zinc (+ Hyaluronic Acid for HERS)
- Supports Heart and Joints Health for Lifelong Wellness — Omega-3s, Vitamin K2, CoQ10, bioactive Turmeric

HERS exclusive benefits:

- Urinary Tract Health — Cranberry extract
- Hair, Skin & Nails (extra boost) — Hyaluronic Acid + Biotin

HIS exclusive benefits:

- Prostate Health — Lycopene
- Vitality & Bone Strength — Boron ("supports healthy hormone metabolism and bone strength")

Mandatory disclaimer (FDA-required for every claim above): "These statements have not been evaluated by the Food and Drug Administration. This product is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure, or prevent any disease."

0.4 Brand-approved AG1 vs. Aonic Complete comparison (the strongest competitive asset in this dossier)

This comparison was originally inferred from public sources in §G1 of this dossier. The version below is the brand-approved factual teardown and should be preferred over any inferred competitive language elsewhere in this document:

Where AG1 is at parity with Aonic Complete (3 things):

- Superfoods, Greens, Fruits, Herbs ✓
- Probiotic blend ✓
- 20mg Zinc ✓

Where Aonic Complete delivers at clinical dose, AG1 does NOT include at all (7 ingredients):

- 1g Omega-3 Fish Oil
- 50mcg Vitamin D3
- 200mcg Vitamin K1
- 180mcg Iodine
- 20mg PQQ
- Postbiotics (450mg Tributyrin)
- 500mg Turmeric Curcumin

Where AG1 includes but underdoses below research-backed levels (6 ingredients):

- 1.5mg Vitamin A
- 150mg Vitamin E
- 200mcg Chromium
- 5g Inulin Prebiotic Fiber
- 5mg Biotin
- 200mg CoQ10

What AG1 has no equivalent for (gender-variant layer):

- HERS: 90mg Cranberry extract + 80mg Hyaluronic Acid
- HIS: 15mg Lycopene + 6mg Boron

Format comparison: Aonic Complete's "beautiful on-the-go design & great taste" vs. AG1's "messy powder, weird taste."

Brand-approved bottom line (verbatim — use this exact framing in long-form copy):

"AG1 is a greens powder. Aonic Complete is a complete daily nutrient platform — every ingredient at its scientifically studied dose. The three things AG1 does well, Aonic Complete does too. The fifteen-plus things Aonic Complete does, AG1 either doesn't do at all or doesn't do enough."

0.5 Pricing reality check — corrects $1 and $6 of this dossier

The original dossier (Insight #2 of the Executive Summary, the Competitive Teardown table, and several "Aonic wedge" notes) framed Aonic Complete's price as lower than AG1. That framing is wrong and must be corrected before any copy is briefed off this dossier.

	AG1 (Athletic Greens)	Aonic Complete
Monthly price	$79 (sub) – $99 (one-time)	$115 / 30-day supply
Annualized	$948 – $1,188+	~$1,380

Aonic is more expensive than AG1 monthly. The actual value-frame the brand uses (per offer brief, p.9) is stack-consolidation, not undercutting: Complete consolidates ~$230/month of separate-product spend into one $115 box. ~$1,800/year savings vs. building the equivalent stack à la carte.

Where this changes the dossier:

- The $1,188/year AG1 churn-trigger quote is still valid — but it's an indictment of AG1, not a price claim Aonic should mirror. Aonic's pitch is AG1 doesn't replace your stack; Complete does.

- "Install the same morning ritual at a third of the price" (Executive Summary Insight #4) — wrong. Replace with: Install a more complete morning ritual at less than the stack you're currently building around AG1.
- The Competitive Teardown table's "Aonic wedge" against AG1 ("Same morning ritual without the marketing tax") — wrong about price. The wedge is completeness, mechanism, and gender-variant formulation, NOT lower price.

0.6 Brand-required language anchors (preserve verbatim in copy)

From the offer brief and Product Book combined — these phrasings are non-negotiable:

- "Daily Essential Nutrition" (category)
- "Made in USA with globally sourced ingredients" (origin)
- "Clinically studied dosages" OR "scientifically studied dosages" (efficacy framing — NEVER "clinically effective")
- "No pixie-dusting" (transparency)
- "Patent-pending dual-chamber design" (mechanism)
- "We-Use-It-Ourselves Guarantee" (risk-reversal — brand does NOT offer refunds)
- "Supports..." for any structure-function claim (NEVER cures / treats / prevents)
- "Brain Health & Function" (NEVER "focus")
- "Immune Support" (NEVER "boost immunity")
- "Zero grams added sugar" (NEVER "no added sugar")
- "From our small space in San Francisco, we're redefining the health and wellness space..." (origin story anchor)
- The 5 Aonic Principles: Built with Intent & Impact / Scientifically Studied Dosages / Premium Ingredients / Delicious Taste, Low in Calories / We-Use-It-Ourselves Guarantee

0.7 What this section supersedes elsewhere in the dossier

The dossier body below has not been rewritten — the verbatim VOC quotes remain valid and useful. Where the dossier body contradicts §0 above (price framing, single-product assumption, mechanism story), §0 is authoritative. Specifically:

- Pricing references in §1 Insight #4 and §6 Competitive Teardown → corrected in §0.5
- Single-format / "one product" assumption throughout → corrected in §0.1 (dual-format)
- Inferred AG1 comparison in §G1 → superseded by brand-approved version in §0.4
- "Aonic wedge" notes in §6 table → mechanism + completeness, NOT price (§0.5)

1. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY — Top 10 insights for Complete, ranked by copy-actionability

1. The "AG1 is a marketing company, not a product company" frame is the entire competitive opening. "AG1 is not a product company, it's a marketing company." (Synergy Startup Substack.)

Bryan Johnson called it an "influencer heist." Fortune quoted experts saying "They're selling an idea of health... Do they deliver? Not scientifically." Aonic Complete's wedge isn't "we have better ingredients." It's we're a product, not a podcast ad spend.

2. The annualized math is the churn trigger. Not "AG1 didn't work" — most quitters admitted some benefit. The trigger is $1,188/year. "Cancelled after three months. Not because it didn't work — I genuinely felt better. Because the annual math hit me: $1,188 a year for something I could approximate with a single greens powder for $300-360." (r/Supplements via Useful Vitamins.) Lead with the annualized number in pricing copy.

3. "Drawer full of half-empty bottles" is the most repeated, most universal Chloe / Ben / healthspan pain across all four research streams. "I was THAT woman taking 12 different supplements every morning, turning my kitchen counter into a pharmacy." (Fab Fit Mommy.) "If your kitchen cabinet looks like a graveyard of half-empty supplement bottles, you aren't alone." (Hormone Health & Weight Loss.) "I needed more than another supplement that would sit unused in my cabinet." (Fab Fit Mommy.) Industry has a name for this now: "pill fatigue." It is the cleanest cross-persona positioning.

4. The loyalty mechanism Aonic must replace is "covered" + "safety net" + "ritual" — not "felt different." "I take it as a nutritional safety net." (Trail and Kale.) "It's a good foundational habit." (Wellness Verge.) "This ritual gives me focus and clarity for the day." (Sanja, AG1, 3-year user.) "It helps me feel like I've already done something good for my body before coffee." (Trail and Kale.) Aonic's task isn't to claim more effects — it's to install the same morning ritual at a third of the price.

5. Taste is a free competitive lane. AG1 customer descriptors of AG1 itself: "drinking pond water (with some of that pond scum on top)," "like drinking algae covered in hay," "Most mornings I have to choke it down," "I now mix it with about 3 oz water... and hold my breath," "I've been choking on Athletic Greens for the last few years and am glad those days are over." Huel: "pond water someone left an apple in with mushrooms growing around the edges," "horse poo," "repulsive and fowl." Amazing Grass: "tastes like cigarette smoke," "big bite out of your lawn." Naked Greens: "straight-up grass." If Aonic Complete tastes like anything other than punishment, that is a hero claim.

6. "Back to being me" / "feel like myself again" is the safest, most repeated outcome phrase in the Chloe segment. Variants: "Back to being me!" (Health & Her customer.) "I felt myself again." (Carrie A.) "I almost didn't know myself anymore" (negative pole). The Fab Fit Mommy template is the compliance-clean gold standard: "Did it cure my perimenopause symptoms? No. Did it make me feel more equipped to handle them? Absolutely." — copywriter should mirror that exact construction.

7. The Ritual "minimalism" narrative is doing real work for Ritual — and is also Ritual's biggest weakness Aonic can exploit. Praise: "Love the fact that these vitamins don't contain a bunch of ingredients that I can't pronounce." "The only vitamin I've stuck to." Complaint surfaced by dietitians and switchers: "only 8 ingredients, doesn't have everything I need." (Plus chronic "fishy burps that burned their throat and almost made them vomit for three days.") Aonic Complete's wedge: we have everything Ritual leaves out — and you don't burp it back up.

8. The Mary Claire Haver stack is the de-facto perimenopause ingredient checklist Chloe reads off the back of the bottle. Magnesium L-threonate, creatine, omega-3, vitamin D + K2, fiber + probiotics, collagen. "After 40, women lose muscle mass at an accelerated rate." If Aonic Complete is missing any of these for Chloe — or includes them at sub-clinical doses — back-of-bottle audits will catch it. The "TikTok ingredient hostage situation" is real.

9. The 50+ healthspan buyer is more reachable than the AG1 churner — and his on-ramp is bloodwork, not branding. "I want to be the guy who's hiking with my grandkids at 75, not the guy in a recliner." (iHerb wellness post.) "My dad's heart attack was a wake-up call." "I decided to order AG1 for him" (wife buying for husband — the canonical 50+ trigger). His current product is Centrum: "I've taken Centrum Silver (over 50) for several years as recommended by my doctor. I have had no side effects of any type." The wedge isn't AG1; it's "Centrum is Pfizer, synthetic Es, beta carotene, magnesium oxide that's 4% absorbed."

10. There are exactly two emotional buyers, and they are different. The "I want the most optimized stack" buyer (Ben at his most online) wants methylated B12, chelated minerals, NSF cert, dose transparency. The "I just want one bottle" buyer wants the kitchen counter back. Most ads in this category implicitly speak to the first buyer; the second is bigger and quieter. "Pill fatigue is a very real, often overlooked side effect of over-supplementing." (People's Rx.) "Too many pills. Too many tubs." (Matt Johnson, The Feed.) These two buyers can be reached with the same product but require different headlines.

2. PERSONA SNAPSHOTS

2A. BEN — 29, gym-active biohacker, podcast listener, "the one thing I take every morning"

Core belief in one sentence: "If I lift hard and eat reasonably well, the one thing missing is the boring stuff — minerals, omega-3, B vitamins. I want it sorted in one product so I can keep my whey, my creatine, and my coffee."

Verbatim panel — how Ben describes his stack:

- "If I had to recommend a core supplement stack to everyone it would be: high-quality Omega 3, Magnesium (glycinate ideally), Vitamin D3, B-Complex, High-quality probiotic like Seed or Pendulum." — Reddit u/nodice124, quoted in RadcRTV. <https://radcrtv.com/blogs/health-and-wellness/community-insights-reddits-favorite-biohacking-supplements>
- "Most people like to take their Creatine in the morning, just because it's easiest to remember to take it along with other daily supplements like Vitamin D, fish oils, and a multivitamin." — BUBS Naturals (paraphrasing r/Fitness consensus). <https://www.bubsnaturals.com/blogs/creatine-and-fitness/can-i-drink-creatine-in-the-morning-optimal-timing-for-results>
- "His morning stack includes Momentous Creatine, high-dose Momentous Omega-3, vitamin D3, and magnesium." — Peter Attia's documented stack, widely cited as Ben's template. <https://routinebase.com/routine/daily/peter-attia/>
- "I started with L-theanine and caffeine, and it changed my entire approach to productivity — all the focus benefits of coffee without feeling like my heart's trying to escape my chest." — r/Nootropics quoted in RadcRTV.

Verbatim panel — what Ben buys foundational coverage FOR:

- "It gives me peace of mind that I'm doing something good." — Morgan Smith, AG1 user, Fortune. <https://fortune.com/2025/01/24/ag1-athletic-greens-supplements-green-powder-bryan-johnson/>
- "Better and more balanced energy throughout the day." — Morgan Smith, Fortune.

- "An insurance policy for your health." — Reddit r/Supplements consensus paraphrase. <https://smartfinancial.com/are-vitamins-and-supplements-covered-by-insurance>
- "It's not a replacement for food — it's a safety net." — Reddit r/Supplements user quote.
- "I take it as a nutritional safety net, especially when I'm traveling." — Trail and Kale AG1 review. <https://trailandkale.com/ag1-next-gen-review/>
- "It helps me feel like I've already done something good for my body before coffee." — Trail and Kale.
- "Most efficient way for me to cover my nutritional bases." — AG1 verified reviewer. <https://drinkag1.com/en-eu/about-ag1/benefits>

Verbatim panel — Ben's objections to a daily foundational:

- "I tried every supplement under the sun before realizing my sleep was trash. Fixed my sleep, and suddenly the supplements I was taking actually started working." — r/Biohackers via RadcRTV.
- "The biohack that helped me most was neglecting nootropics in favor of solid sleep, exercise, and nutrition habits." — r/Nootropics user.
- "Clean up your diet before spending hundreds on supplements." — Reddit user quoted in RadcRTV.
- "It's a pain in the ass to have to go through ten things every morning." — Reddit critique of Huberman routine. <https://www.setforset.com/blogs/news/andrew-hubermans-morning-routine>
- "The 16,667% B12 thing bothers me. I asked their support if it's methylcobalamin or cyanocobalamin. It's cyanocobalamin. That's the cheap form." — u/methylation_matters, r/nutrition (via Useful Vitamins). <https://usefulvitamins.com/is-ag1-worth-it/>

What this means for copy targeting Ben: Don't sell Ben on "energy" — he gets that from coffee, creatine, and squats. Sell him on dose transparency (methylated B12, not cyanocobalamin), inclusion of vitamin D (the AG1 omission Ben knows about), NSF / third-party testing, and the price-to-stack math ("you'd pay $X to assemble this; we charge Y"). Lifestyle imagery should be lifting-adjacent but not bro-y.

2B. CHLOE — late 30s to mid-40s mom, online wellness follower, perimenopause-aware

Core belief in one sentence: "I'm doing everything I'm supposed to and I still feel like garbage by 2 PM. There has to be one product that does what my 12 bottles are pretending to do."

Verbatim panel — how Chloe describes her current state (Tina-letter-level specificity):

- "I went from feeling sharp and on top of everything... to forgetting words, memory loss, losing my train of thought, and second-guessing myself daily." — Denise Chiriboga, Strong Mom. <https://www.strongmom.ca/symptoms-of-brain-fog-in-perimenopause/>
- "I'm not feral, just perimenopausal." — viral one-liner cited by HealthyWomen. <https://www.healthywomen.org/your-health/menopause-aging-well/dealing-with-rage-during-the-perimenopause-transition-and-beyond>
- "shoveling mouthfuls of Trader Joe's Peppermint Jo-Jo's in-between sobs and dry heaves." — Lauren Gonzalez, Medium. <https://dirtylaundryshow.medium.com/the-one-where-i-cry-in-the-trader-joes-parking-lot-afcd019704ec>

- "I cry a lot in front of my kids." — Makeba Greene, Seattle's Child. <https://www.seattleschild.com/perimenopause-symptoms-brain-fog-moms/>
- "I'd be sitting in the boardroom and feel my self welling up at the stupidist of things... you're furiously buttock clenching desperately trying to not show you're welling up!" — Andrea Marsh, Cotswold Menopause. <https://www.cotswoldmenopause.co.uk/post/perimenopause-blog-why-do-i-cry-at-everything>
- "Things which would have made me slightly angry in the past now make me absolutely furious." — Mumsnet "In an absolute rage" thread. <https://www.mumsnet.com/talk/menopause/5293726-in-an-absolute-rage>
- "I turned into Shrek and went on hrt as soon as possible." — Mumsnet user.
- "It's 5:47 AM, you're making lunches with one hand while checking emails with the other, and you realize you haven't had a single vegetable in 48 hours." — Fab Fit Mommy. <https://thefabfitmommy.com/gruns-vs-ag1-review-women-40s/>
- "That 'blah' feeling that no amount of coffee could fix." — Fab Fit Mommy.
- "Heightened anxiety about stuff I used to do relatively confidently. A lot of anger. Bloating. Random skin breakouts!" — Rebekah Brown, Mpowder. <https://mpowder.store/pages/natural-perimenopause-remedy>

Verbatim panel — Chloe's current stack and her fatigue with it:

- "I was that woman taking 12 different supplements every morning, turning my kitchen counter into a pharmacy, and still feeling like garbage by 2 PM." — Fab Fit Mommy AG1 review. <https://thefabfitmommy.com/ag1-review-for-women/>
- "I needed more than another supplement that would sit unused in my cabinet." — Fab Fit Mommy.
- "I wanted something simple and convenient. Not a cabinet full of different supplements to remember every morning." — Fancy My Way, 46-year-old author. <https://fancymyway.com/the-best-daily-greens-powder-for-women-over-40-live-it-up-vs-ag1-review/>
- "If your kitchen cabinet looks like a graveyard of half-empty supplement bottles, you aren't alone." — Hormone Health & Weight Loss. <https://hormonehealthandweightloss.com/health-insight/menopause-supplements-scam-vs-science>
- "You buy it, you take it for three weeks, you feel exactly the same, and the bottle gets pushed to the back of the shelf." — Same source.
- "throwing money at the problem and hoping something sticks." — Same source.
- "I take vit D, turmeric, allicin(garlic), magnesium, omega 3, small dose calcium, B12 and iodine!" — Mumsnet menopause supplement thread. <https://www.mumsnet.com/talk/menopause/5060734-supplement-recommendations>
- "Vitamin B complex for energy. Vitamin D3 with K2 for bones. A good quality omega 3 for joints. Magnesium for sleep." — Mumsnet DustyLee123 (canonical Chloe stack). <https://www.mumsnet.com/talk/menopause/5010933-supplements>

Verbatim panel — what Chloe wants (outcome language):

- "Back to being me!" — Clare Q., Health & Her. <https://healthandher.com/en-us/products/health-her-perimenopause-multi-nutrient-support-supplement>
- "I felt myself again." — Carrie A., Health & Her.
- "I have more energy, my mood swings have decreased significantly along with the brain fog." — 39-year-old mother of four, Health & Her.

- "My usual 3 PM energy crash? Gone. Post-meal bloating? Significantly reduced." — Fab Fit Mommy. <https://thefabfitmommy.com/gruns-vs-ag1-review-women-40s/>
- "Did it cure my perimenopause symptoms? No. Did it make me feel more equipped to handle them? Absolutely." — Fab Fit Mommy AG1 review (the canonical compliance-clean outcome framing — copywriter should mirror exactly).
- "It became my morning anchor. I actually craved that earthy taste because my body associated it with feeling better." — Same source.
- "I no longer suffer from bloating, my anxiety has significantly reduced and my sleep is so much better." — Katherine C., Mpowder. <https://mpowder.store/pages/natural-perimenopause-remedy>

Verbatim panel — Chloe's objections (especially doctor-dismissal):

- "You're too young for perimenopause." — Dismissive doctor quote, Her Health Collective. <https://herhealthcollective.com/midlife-moms-what-to-say-when-your-doctor-dismisses-perimenopause-symptoms/>
- "Your labs are normal." — Same.
- "It's just stress." — Same.
- "Every mom feels tired." — Same.
- "I spent almost three years being dismissed by doctors, and told to nap more." — Libby H., Midi. <https://www.joinmidi.com/testimonials>
- "At 46, I don't want to waste money on something I dread drinking or can't stick with." — Fancy My Way blogger.
- "due to financial reasons took about 3 months off" — Carrie A., Health & Her (cost objection in her own life).
- "It's easy to feel like the entire supplement industry is just one giant, promising scam." — Hormone Health & Weight Loss.

What this means for copy targeting Chloe: Lead with specificity of symptom recognition — she's been gaslit by doctors. Use her own language back to her ("you've been told it's just stress; here's what it actually is"). Position Aonic Complete as the one product that replaces the kitchen-counter pharmacy — not as a cure, but as the foundation that lets other interventions (sleep, HRT, exercise) work. Mirror Mary Claire Haver's ingredient credibility (magnesium L-threonate, omega-3, D+K2, creatine for women over 40). Avoid "balance hormones" — TikTok says it; FTC flags it.

2C. OLDER HEALTHSPAN BUYER (50+) — Centrum loyalist, AG1-curious-but-balked, often spouse-influenced

Core belief in one sentence: "I've been taking Centrum since the kids were in middle school. My doctor says it's fine. But my friend's wife got him on this greens thing and apparently his bloodwork is better — should I switch?"

Verbatim panel — how this buyer describes his life stage:

- "Healthspan is how many of those years we feel good (physically and mentally) and are healthy enough to live independently and free from debilitating diseases." — Aging With Strength definitional frame. <https://www.agingwithstrength.com/p/cheatsheet-the-top-11-longevity-supplements>

- "I want to be the guy who's hiking with my grandkids at 75, not the guy in a recliner." — iHerb men over 40. <https://www.iherb.com/blog/best-supplements-for-men-over-40/2274>
- "Subtle changes in energy, metabolism, muscle mass, and hormone levels often start to show up." — Omre US men over 40. <https://omre.co/blogs/news/best-supplements-for-men-over-40>
- "Energy wasn't as steady, and even simple things like bouncing back after a cold or workout felt different." — Perelel over-40 article reflecting customer voice. <https://perelelhealth.com/blogs/news/supplements-over-age-40>
- "Nearly 70% of men aged 60 and over take at least one dietary supplement in the previous 30 days." — AARP. <https://www.aarp.org/health/drugs-supplements/supplements-after-50/>
- "The rate of Vitamin B12 deficiency jumps to 20% in people over 60 years of age." — AARP.

Verbatim panel — the Centrum-loyal voice:

- "I've taken Centrum Silver (over 50) for several years as recommended by my doctor. I have had no side effects of any type." — Drugs.com Centrum Silver review. <https://www.drugs.com/comments/multivitamin-with-minerals/centrum-silver.html>
- "I have been taking Centrum Silver for years. No problems." — Same source.
- "Just about to start a jug of Centrum Silver Men's 50+ vitamins." — BobIsTheOilGuy forum. <https://bobistheoilguy.com/forums/threads/centrum-silver-or-one-a-day-men-50.365253/>
- "I usually get Equate men's 50+ at Walmart... similar to Centrum but at a much cheaper price." — Same forum.
- "It's fine, when comparing its RDA percentages and what it contains, it compares favorably to most other brands." — Bodybuilding.com Centrum defender. <https://forum.bodybuilding.com/showthread.php?t=91252&page=1>

Verbatim panel — the Centrum-switcher voice (the wedge Aonic should drive):

- "There is not enough B complex in it to help." — Bodybuilding.com forum critic.
- "Centrum's ingredients are synthetic." — Practitioner blog. <https://joshgitalis.com/chemical-cocktail-or-health-product/>
- "garbage ... there is not enough B complex in it to help, and some doctors note that more people will not digest the Centrum pill to make it worth taking." — Bodybuilding.com.
- "Centrum is made by Pfizer and uses synthetic vitamin E and beta carotene, the oxide form of magnesium which only 4% is absorbed, hydrogenated palm oil (a trans-fat), and artificial colors including FD&C Blue #2, Yellow #6 and Red #40." — HumanTonik comparison. <https://humantonik.com/ag1-vs-multivitamins/>
- "Switching from a generic store-brand multivitamin to Thorne Basic Nutrients, with energy improved significantly within eight weeks. After three months, follow-up labs showed vitamin D at optimal levels and homocysteine had dropped by 30%." — Reddit case summary. <https://www.alibaba.com/product-insights/reddit-best-multivitamin-choices-for-daily-wellness-and-support.html>
- "For those aged 50+, look for supplements that provide 150% to 200% of the recommended daily allowance (RDA) ... to help counter reduced absorption." — Healthspan UK ("Centrum isn't enough anymore"). <https://www.healthspan.co.uk/advice/body/why-you-need-stronger-supplements-over-the-age-of-50/>
- "Most men over 50 should switch to a senior-formulated multivitamin for better absorption." — Eldrio. <https://eldrio.com/why-do-50-multivitamins-not-have-iron-unpacking-the-reasons-for-iron->

Verbatim panel — One A Day vulnerabilities Aonic can rebut without naming the brand:

- "Within an hour of taking it, urine turns a radioactive, neon yellow." — Amazon One A Day review. <https://www.amazon.com/Mens-Health-Formula-Multivitamin-Count/dp/B001F71XAI>
- "These tablets make me sick to my stomach not just occasionally, but every time I take one." — One A Day customer review. <https://shop.athleticinsight.com/blogs/reviews/one-a-day-multivitamin-review>
- "the magnesium provided is via Magnesium Oxide, which is poorly absorbed by the body." — Same.
- "tablets are massive ... feel dense and chalky, potentially lodging in the esophagus for twenty minutes." — Amazon One A Day review.

Verbatim panel — the spouse-bought / doctor-triggered purchase pattern:

- "I decided to order AG1 for him." — Wife noticing husband's low energy. <https://www.spicespicebaby.com/my-surprising-experience-with-ag1-more-than-just-greens-supplement/>
- "The taste is one of the biggest reasons my wife and I buy ag1." — Spouse-pair purchase, AG1.
- "My dad's heart attack was a wake-up call. Now I'm determined to improve preventative medicine for everyone." — Our Future Health.
- "Started by his wife in her mid-50s to keep up with her increasing need for dietary supplements." — Healthspan UK Trustpilot.
- "My doctor said they don't need to test for vitamin D deficiency because most everyone is deficient. Should I just start taking supplements?" — Quora poster. <https://www.quora.com/My-doctor-said-they-dont-need-to-test-for-vitamin-D-deficiency-because-most-everyone-is-deficient-Should-I-just-start-taking-supplements>

What this means for copy targeting the older healthspan buyer: This buyer is more reachable than the AG1 churner — but his on-ramp is bloodwork (low vitamin D, high homocysteine), a spouse, or a cardiac event in his peer group, NOT influencer marketing. The disruption wedge isn't "we're better than AG1" — it's "your Centrum is made by Pfizer with magnesium oxide that's 4% absorbed, beta carotene, palm oil, and three artificial dyes." Position Aonic Complete as the upgrade your doctor would actually recommend (without claiming it's clinically endorsed — Aonic doesn't make that claim). Lean on methyalted B12, chelated minerals, vitamin D3 + K2, 150-200% RDA absorption math that this segment already knows.

3. DEEP RESEARCH — A through G

A. Demographic & psychographic

Who is actually buying foundational/daily supplements?

Three intersecting cohorts surface across the data:

1. The 27-35 fitness-tracking professional (Ben) — almost universally male in the language signature, gym-active, podcast-saturated. Buys for "insurance" and "coverage." Will pay for transparency and third-party testing. Skeptical of "felt effect" claims. Quote: "It gives me peace of mind that I'm doing something good." (Morgan Smith, Fortune.)

2. The 35-48 wellness-curious mom (Chloe) — overwhelmingly female. Buys for energy, hormonal symptoms, healthy aging, and convenience. Driven by creators (Mary Claire Haver, Stacy Sims, Drew Barrymore, Halle Berry, Tamsen Fadal, Naomi Watts). Quote: "I've tried sooo many different vitamins over the last few years as I was inching towards 50." (Amazon Health & Her review.)
3. The 50-72 healthspan-curious longtime multivitamin user — mixed gender; men often spouse-prompted. Centrum-loyal or just-quit-Centrum. Quote: "I've taken Centrum Silver (over 50) for several years as recommended by my doctor." AARP data: "Nearly 70% of men aged 60 and over take at least one dietary supplement."

Attitudes toward supplements broadly — skeptical, true believer, or mixed?

The market is bimodal, not normally distributed. There's a hard skeptic camp ("expensive pee," "snake oil of the 21st century") and a true-believer camp ("I feel off when I skip"). The middle is small. Aonic Complete needs to talk to both — skeptics need dose math and third-party testing; believers need ritual language.

Skeptic verbatim:

- "Most supplements do not prevent chronic disease or death, their use is not justified and they should be avoided." — Annals of Internal Medicine editorial, Scientific American. <https://www.scientificamerican.com/article/multivitamins-are-a-waste-of-money-doctors-say/>
- "most of the time they seem to just give you expensive pee." — reader comment on Holly Hammersmith.
- "Just EAT YOUR DAMN VEGGIES!" — Aparna Jain Substack.
- "AG1 combines the 'just in case' marketing of the multivitamin industry and unproven wellness ingredients into an expensive cocktail for the worried well." — Jonathan Jarry, McGill OSS.

Believer verbatim:

- "It's not like taking a drug where you feel a dramatic change. It's more like removing a weight you didn't know was there. Suddenly you're just... better. Calmer. More focused. But still completely yourself." — Reddit L-theanine user via RadcRTV.
- "My energy completely changed when I started [vitamin D]." — Reddit user pattern.
- "After about a month my hair stopped the massive amount of daily shedding I had been experiencing. My tummy is more settled, I feel less bloated and my moods are more even." — Happy Mammoth perimenopause supplement review.

Hopes and dreams — what's the emotional payoff in their words?

Not "feel better." Specifically:

- "feel like myself again" / "back to being me" — the Chloe core
- "the guy who's hiking with my grandkids at 75, not the guy in a recliner" — the healthspan core
- "covered" / "safety net" / "insurance" — the Ben core
- "set it and forget it" / "one less thing to think about" — the cross-persona simplifier
- "I feel more equipped to handle them" — the compliance-safe version of "feel like myself"

Victories and failures with daily supplements so far:

The pattern is "I tried things, mostly didn't notice anything, sometimes felt something, and now I have a drawer full of half-empty bottles." Specific failure quotes:

- "You buy it, you take it for three weeks, you feel exactly the same, and the bottle gets pushed to the back of the shelf." (Hormone Health & Weight Loss.)
- "I started forgetting to take them. When a supplement doesn't create noticeable changes, it's easy to skip." (Fab Fit Mommy.)
- "I have tried EVERYTHING, and nothing has helped." (Pause Life sleep product reviews.)
- "I felt good after drinking it, but nothing really extraordinary." (AG1 reviewer.)

Outside forces they blame:

- Time / kid stage: "Kids went to school and I finally had a second to think about myself." (Implied Mumsnet pattern.)
- Money: "Cancelled after 6 months... couldn't justify $99/month." (AG1 churner pattern.)
- Hormones (Chloe): "menopause has caused my body to change without my diet / exercise changing." (Mumsnet meno-belly thread.)
- Doctors who dismiss: "I spent almost three years being dismissed by doctors, and told to nap more." (Midi.)
- Decision fatigue: "Pill fatigue is a very real, often overlooked side effect of over-supplementing." (People's Rx.)
- Marketing exhaustion: "It's easy to feel like the entire supplement industry is just one giant, promising scam." (Hormone Health & Weight Loss.)

Prejudices Aonic must overcome:

- "Multivitamins are expensive pee."
- "Greens powders taste like grass clippings." (Amazing Grass customer.)
- "AG1 is a marketing company."
- "If a 'foundation' does everything, it can't do anything well — it's pixie-dusting." (Bryan Johnson's term, viral.)
- "Influencers shilling a $100 bag of vitamins is the snake oil of the 21st century." (Aparna Jain.)
- "Bloom is a SCAM. At only 1,367mg per greens serving, I am shocked they call themselves a greens powder." (@consciouslykay, TikTok.)
- "There is no such thing as a superfood." (Jonathan Jarry, McGill.)

Core beliefs in 1-3 sentences per persona:

Ben: "Food first, but I lift hard and my diet's imperfect, so coverage matters. I want the boring ingredients (D, omega-3, magnesium, B vitamins) at clinical doses, in clean forms, ideally NSF certified. I don't trust influencers and I read the back of the bottle."

Chloe: "My body started doing something nobody warned me about around 38-42. My doctor brushed me off. Mary Claire Haver and Stacy Sims explained it. I'm building a stack of magnesium-glycinate-D3-K2-omega-3-creatine-collagen and I want ONE product that does most of it so I can stop forgetting which bottle is which."

Healthspan buyer: "I've been on Centrum for years. My doctor says it's fine but I keep reading that my magnesium oxide isn't absorbing and my B12 should be methylated. My wife saw something on TikTok. My friend's bloodwork got better when he switched. I want to be the guy hiking with the grandkids."

B. Existing solutions

Ranked by frequency mentioned across all four research streams:

1. AG1 (Athletic Greens) — the elephant. Owns the foundational-greens-powder category in customer mindshare. "I've been using AG1 for at least 5 years." (Andrea B.) Pricing is the central friction. See full AG1 hostile-witness deep dive in section G.
2. The individual-ingredient stack — vitamin D, magnesium glycinate, omega-3, B-complex (often methylated), creatine, probiotic. Highest frequency among Reddit/biohacker voices and among Mary Claire Haver-listeners. "If I had to recommend a core supplement stack... high-quality Omega 3, Magnesium (glycinate ideally), Vitamin D3, B-Complex, High-quality probiotic like Seed or Pendulum."
3. A legacy multivitamin — Centrum / Centrum Silver / One A Day / Equate. The 50+ default. Quote: "I've taken Centrum Silver (over 50) for several years as recommended by my doctor."
4. Ritual Essential for Women / Men — strong with the 25-40 transparency-minded female buyer. Praised for minimalism, attacked for "doesn't have enough in it" and fish burps. Quote: "the only vitamin I've stuck to."
5. A perimenopause-positioned multi — Health & Her, Mpowder, Menopace, Wild Nutrition, MenoFriend (Dr. Vegan), Happy Mammoth, Feel Menopause, Vegetology. "I take Dr Vegan MenoFriend and Multivitamin which are excellent." (Mumsnet.)
6. Thorne Basic Nutrients 2/Day — small-but-vocal serious-supplement crowd. "It's almost perfect as a cover-your-bases approach." (LongeCity.)
7. Huel Daily Greens — taste-divisive AG1 alternative. "I feel as good as I did with the AG1." (Huel forum.)
8. Bloom Greens — TikTok-discovered, polarized between brand-loyal and accusing-of-being-a-scam.
9. Live It Up Super Greens — explicit AG1 alternative, "much less costly... much better."
10. Care/of (defunct) — emotional migration audience. "Please please please figure something out! This makes me so sad!"
11. Nothing / "I gave up" — the Michaela Janoskova archetype: "I've stopped taking AG1 and other nutrient drinks... Instead, I drink water with lemon, occasionally a smoothie with collagen peptides, and then my all-time favorite drink — coffee."

What they like about existing solutions (verbatim):

- "I've been able to stop using several other supplements because the dosage in AG1 is sufficient... it is SO much nicer having a refreshing drink first thing in a morning, than a handful of supplement capsules." — Annie SL, AG1 user.
- "I love the fact that these vitamins don't contain a bunch of ingredients that I can't pronounce." — Ritual customer.
- "This ritual gives me focus and clarity for the day." — Sanja, AG1 3-year user.
- "It's almost perfect as a cover-your-bases approach." — Thorne 2/day, LongeCity.
- "Thorne 2/day is clean and my preferred basic multivitamin." — LongeCity user baccheion.

What they dislike (verbatim):

- AG1 taste: "like drinking pond water (with some of that pond scum on top)" / "like drinking algae covered in hay" / "I have to choke it down" / "hold my breath."
- AG1 price: "$1,188 a year" / "$3.30/day" / "1800% markup."
- Ritual: "fishy burps that burned their throat and almost made them vomit for three days" / "after 3-4 months, I had LOST more than half of the hair on my head" / "this product is a waste of money."
- Huel: "pond water someone left an apple in with mushrooms growing around the edges" / "horse poo" / "horrible bitter Stevia aftertaste."
- Bloom: "every time I get a bad headache and crazy bloating, stomach cramping" / "Bloom is a SCAM. At only 1,367mg per greens serving."
- Amazing Grass: "Tastes like cigarette smoke" / "big bite out of your lawn."
- Garden of Life: "capsules smell like vomit, and opening the bottle reveals a wiff of sour stink" / "I too get very loose stools from this vitamin."
- One A Day: "neon yellow" urine / "vitamin burps, a metallic aftertaste" / "dense and chalky, potentially lodging in the esophagus."
- Centrum: "garbage" / "there is not enough B complex in it to help" / "more people will not digest the Centrum pill to make it worth taking."

Horror stories (handled with care — flagged where comparative-claims risk exists):

- Ritual hair loss anecdote (single user, not Aonic's to repeat as fact): "I took the essential for women 18+ vitamin for 3-4 months and after a few months, I had LOST more than half of the hair on my head." — Commenter "Jess." [COMPLIANCE FLAG.]
- Bloom GI distress (single user, structure-function adjacent): "every time I get a bad headache and crazy bloating, stomach cramping, and having to go to the bathroom multiple times." [FLAG.]
- AG1 batch quality (multiple sources): "One batch had a taste that was noticeably off, almost stale, making it hard to get down. Another batch caused stomach issues for us, which was unexpected and definitely concerning." — Midlionnaire.

Does the market believe daily foundational supplements work?

The "expensive pee" camp is loud but represents the technically-engaged minority. The much larger silent majority believes daily supplements work, but is constantly disappointed by specific products. The "I didn't feel anything from AG1" quote is paired more often than not with "but I'm still buying some daily thing." The market wants to believe — it's looking for a product that earns the belief.

C. Objections and friction

What stops people from buying a daily foundational:

- Price (especially AG1): "At the price point, I had a hard time justifying maintaining the expense." (Chris Jessulat.) "Cancelled after three months. Not because it didn't work — I genuinely felt better. Because the annual math hit me: $1,188 a year."
- "Another supplement": "I needed more than another supplement that would sit unused in my cabinet."
- Partner pushback: "Husband thinks it's a scam." (Implied across Mumsnet threads.) Conversely the wife-buys-for-husband pattern "I decided to order AG1 for him."

- Doctor said no / dismissed: "You're too young for perimenopause." / "Your labs are normal." / "It's just stress."
- "I should just eat better": "unless you have dietary restrictions, getting nutrients from your diet is much more effective." (Mumsnet.) "Clean up your diet before spending hundreds on supplements." (r/Biohackers.)
- Skepticism of foundationals specifically: "the levels of micronutrients in AG1 far exceed the nutrient needs of the general population." (Top Nutrition Coaching.)

What stops people from re-ordering:

- No felt difference: "It doesn't do much. I didn't exactly notice a difference after a month of using this consistently."
- Price exhaustion: "due to financial reasons took about 3 months off." (Carrie A.)
- Subscription friction (this is huge for AG1 specifically): "surreptitiously enrolled by the defendant into an automatically renewing subscription" / "exceedingly difficult and unnecessarily confusing" / "AG1 does not have a one-click cancel button in the member portal." (Hoke v. AG1 (USA), Inc., class action.)
- Taste fatigue: "I never liked it. I didn't hate it, but I didn't look forward to it either." (Alex Smith, 12-month AG1 review.)
- Found a cheaper alternative: "I switched from AG1 to Live It Up Greens about 8 months ago and I like it much better."
- Forgot: "I started forgetting to take them. When a supplement doesn't create noticeable changes, it's easy to skip."

Pre-purchase questions prospects ask (mined from comment sections):

- Does this replace my multivitamin?
- Can I take this with my meds?
- Is the iron too high? Should it have iron?
- What's actually in it? Are the dosages disclosed?
- Is it third-party tested?
- Is it NSF Certified for Sport? (Ben/athlete subset)
- Methylated B12 or cyanocobalamin?
- Magnesium glycinate or magnesium oxide?
- Vitamin D3 dose and K2 inclusion?
- Does it include creatine? (Chloe asking after Mary Claire Haver.)
- How does it taste?
- Is there a subscription? Can I cancel easily? "I signed up for a subscription and then immediately cancelled." (Elisabeth McKnight.)
- Made where? (For AG1 it's a sore point — NZ-made.)
- What about heavy metals / Prop 65? (FLAG: see compliance section.)

D. Trigger events

What happens in the customer's life right before they start searching:

Bloodwork — "My doctor said they don't need to test for vitamin D deficiency because most everyone is deficient." "My doc said my vitamin D was 18." MedlinePlus: "12 nanograms per milliliter or less is considered deficient." (One of the most consistent and copy-actionable triggers across the older healthspan segment.)

Hitting 40 — "I've tried sooo many different vitamins over the last few years as I was inching towards 50." "After 40, your PC levels naturally decline." "When entering your 40s, you may start noticing changes in your cycles, sleep became trickier, energy wasn't as steady."

The first perimenopause symptom cluster — "I was more moody than usual, I had brain fog, my period started to be a little off." (39-year-old mom of four.) "Frequent, heavy periods are what tipped off Drew Barrymore that she was starting perimenopause." "I was like, 'What? No, that's for old people!'" (Brooke Shields.)

Postpartum still not feeling like yourself — Implied across Chloe content. "Postpartum still feels off two years later" archetype.

A creator video — "Doctor Stacy Sims reveals the truth about perimenopause and how soon it can start in women." (Diary of a CEO clip.) "After 40, women lose muscle mass at an accelerated rate." (Mary Claire Haver.) "Mary Claire Haver Obgyn Magnesium L Threonate" (trending TikTok tag).

A partner's comment / spouse-bought — "I decided to order AG1 for him." (Wife buying.) "The taste is one of the biggest reasons my wife and I buy ag1." (Pair purchase.) "Started by his wife in her mid-50s to keep up with her increasing need for dietary supplements."

A peer-group cardiac event — "My dad's heart attack was a wake-up call. Now I'm determined to improve preventative medicine for everyone." (Adult-child reaction.)

Doctor dismissal that finally radicalizes — "I spent almost three years being dismissed by doctors, and told to nap more." (Libby H., Midi.) "felt brushed off, confused, or like you were overreacting." (Her Health Collective.)

New Year / milestone birthday — implied across blog reviews ("I turned X and decided...").

Career collapse from symptoms (Chloe edge case) — "I had a job I loved... I abruptly made the choice to resign in March 2016." (Madhu Kapoor.)

Care/of shutdown (June 2024) — "Please please please figure something out! This makes me so sad!" This audience is still actively migrating. <https://www.vitarx.co/resources/brain-memory-focus/finding-a-replacement-vitamin-pack-company-after-care-of-s-closure>

Time of year: Two real peaks emerge in the data — January (New Year, milestone-birthday-adjacent, post-holiday reset) and late August–October (back-to-school for Chloe, "kids are at school, I finally have time to think about myself," and pre-winter immune anxiety).

E. Language and vocabulary

(Full bank in Section 5 below. Highlights here.)

Problem language (20+):

- "drawer full of half-empty bottles" / "kitchen counter into a pharmacy" / "graveyard of half-empty supplement bottles"

- "running on fumes" / "feeling like garbage by 2 PM" / "3 PM crash"
- "brain fog" / "forgetting the word for a very simple noun like keys" / "second-guessing myself daily"
- "tired but wired" / "wake panicky in the wee hours unable to get back to sleep"
- "I don't feel like myself" / "I almost didn't know myself anymore" / "I feel like I'm going crazy"
- "expensive pee" / "expensive urine" / "increases the financial value of your urine"
- "another expensive marketing scheme" / "snake oil of the 21st century"
- "$1,188 a year" / "$3.30/day" / "1800% markup"
- "pill fatigue" / "too many pills, too many tubs" / "decision fatigue"
- "choke it down" / "hold my breath" / "plug your nose and drink it"
- "pond water" / "horse poo" / "big bite out of your lawn" / "tastes like cigarette smoke"
- "fishy burps" / "vitamin burps" / "metallic aftertaste" / "neon yellow urine"
- "another supplement" / "another pill" / "another bottle I'll abandon"

Outcome language (20+):

- "feel like myself again" / "back to being me" / "I felt myself again"
- "covered" / "safety net" / "insurance policy for your health"
- "set it and forget it" / "one less thing to think about" / "one thing that does everything"
- "real energy not caffeine energy" / "energy that lasts" / "sustained energy" / "even energy"
- "no 3 PM crash" / "didn't reach for my fourth coffee"
- "feel more equipped to handle them" (the compliance-clean Fab Fit Mommy outcome construction)
- "set up for the day" / "already done something good for my body before coffee"
- "morning anchor" / "morning ritual" / "the easiest health habit I've ever maintained"
- "I feel off when I skip it"
- "I sleep like a log" / "sleep through the night again"
- "focus and clarity for the day" (note: Aonic uses "Brain Health & Function" — see compliance)
- "the guy who's hiking with my grandkids at 75, not the guy in a recliner"
- "my numbers came back better" / "homocysteine had dropped by 30%"

Creator-driven phrases gone mainstream in last 12 months:

- "Cortisol cocktail" (TikTok) — Meagan, Tamsen Fadal
- "We Do Not Care Club" — Melani (perimenopause community)
- "I'm not feral, just perimenopausal"
- "Stack" (now used by Chloe and Ben alike)
- "Foundational" (vs. "targeted") — Mary Claire Haver coinage
- "Supplement minimalism" / "girl dinner vitamins"
- "What's in your morning routine" (the entire genre)
- "Magnesium L-threonate" — Mary Claire Haver's TikTok ingredient hostage situation
- "Healthspan" vs. "lifespan" — Peter Attia mainstreaming

Subject-line-worthy phrases pulled from high-engagement threads:

- "AG1 is not a product company, it's a marketing company."
- "$1,188 a year for something I could approximate."

- "I was 100% ready for this to be a 'plug your nose and drink it' experience."
 - "Save your greenbacks."
 - "I'm not feral, just perimenopausal."
 - "Too many pills. Too many tubs."
 - "Did it cure my perimenopause symptoms? No. Did it make me feel more equipped to handle them? Absolutely."
 - "I was that woman taking 12 different supplements every morning, turning my kitchen counter into a pharmacy."

F. Curiosity and category narrative

Ingredient stories and mechanisms the market finds compelling (2025-2026):

- Methylated B vitamins — the technical credibility flag. "It's got the coenzyme versions of the entire B complex and special versions of most everything else." (Reddit r/Supplements on Thorne.) "The 16,667% B12 thing bothers me. I asked their support if it's methylcobalamin or cyanocobalamin. It's cyanocobalamin. That's the cheap form."
- Chelated minerals (especially magnesium glycinate vs. magnesium oxide) — "the magnesium provided is via Magnesium Oxide, which is poorly absorbed by the body." (One A Day.) "the oxide form of magnesium which only 4% is absorbed." (HumanTonik vs. Centrum.)
- Vitamin D3 + K2 synergy — "D3 takes calcium from your gut to your bloodstream, whereas K2 directs calcium from your blood into your bones. Without enough K2, excess calcium stays in your arteries and may lead to calcification." (Reddit BakeYouC via RadcRTV.)
- Bioavailability arguments generally — Thorne's whole positioning. Aonic Complete can lean into "absorbable forms" rather than mega-doses.
- Creatine for women over 40 — "Creatine to support muscle function, especially in women post-40." (Mary Claire Haver.) This is the single fastest-growing ingredient expectation in the Chloe segment in 2025.
- Magnesium L-threonate for cognition — "Magnesium L-threonate to improve sleep quality and cognitive clarity." (Mary Claire Haver.) Has its own TikTok tag.
- Methylated folate — perimenopause-community demand.
- Adaptogens — heavily contested. Skeptic: "Adaptogens lack evidence for their claims." (McGill OSS.) Believer: "I have started taking wild yam which has helped with my mood." (Mumsnet.) Ashwagandha is the most-named, with mixed reception.
- The proprietary-blend critique — "AG1 simply uses far too many ingredients and hides behind a proprietary blend. Almost none of them can be effectively dosed." (Nutri.it.com.) This is a free positioning lane for Aonic: transparent dosages, no proprietary blend.

"Why now" angles live in the category:

- Supplement-stack consolidation as a category trend — "pill fatigue" has now been named by the industry itself.
- Perimenopause mainstreaming — Mary Claire Haver, Stacy Sims, Tamsen Fadal, Drew Barrymore, Halle Berry, Naomi Watts, Oprah, Michelle Obama all on the public record.
- Healthspan vs. lifespan — Peter Attia book and podcast saturating the 50+ market.

- AG1 backlash maturation — Bryan Johnson's "influencer heist" line in Jan 2025 + the class-action filings + Boston Globe Apr 2026 reporting = a year-and-a-half of compounding AG1 critique. Open lane.
- The "back to basics" Ritual narrative cycling out — the "only 8 ingredients" angle has plateaued; complaint patterns about "not enough in it" are surfacing more.
- Care/of's shutdown (June 2024) — left a personalization-disappointed audience actively searching.
- Soil-depletion narrative — present in the data but more brand-pushed than customer-pushed. Note as supporting frame, don't lead with.
- Cortisol / stress as a metabolic narrative — TikTok-led. Risky for compliance ("cortisol belly") but the audience has been primed.

(Per the brief, Big-Pharma-conspiracy framings were not used as research targets. The closest legitimate adjacency captured: "Centrum is made by Pfizer and uses synthetic vitamin E and beta carotene... palm oil... artificial colors." — usable as factual ingredient teardown, not as "Big Pharma" framing.)

G. Competitive positioning intel — the full AG1 hostile-witness section + tier 2 teardown

G1. AG1 — read as a hostile witness

The loyalty mechanism (what keeps people on for years — Aonic must replace):

- "I have religiously taken it nearly every day since then." — Ashley Miller Daniels.
- "I've been starting my mornings with AG1 for three years – always with lemon and ice. This ritual gives me focus and clarity for the day." — Sanja, AG1 official reviews.
- "Now, after taking AG1 daily for more than three years, it's become one of the easiest health habits I've ever maintained." — Chris Freytag, Get Healthy U.
- "That simplicity is exactly why I've been able to stay consistent with it for years." — Chris Freytag.
- "It's a good foundational habit." — Dmitry Ozik, Wellness Verge.
- "I take it as a nutritional safety net, especially when I'm traveling." — Trail and Kale.
- "AG1 gives a sense of security: I know my body and immune system are supported." — Florian, AG1 reviews.
- "AG1 is convenient. Scoop. Shake. Drink. Done. That matters." — Even critics admit (Kato Train Me Please).
- "That feeling of accomplishment? That's real." — Same.

Translation: Aonic Complete's product is irrelevant if it doesn't install a morning ritual. The brand promise is "the easiest health habit you'll ever maintain — without the $1,188/year."

The churn triggers (why people quit):

- Annualized price math: "$1,188 a year" / "making this a $100/month supplement" / "a 30-day recurring subscription will run you about $145 Canadian."
- Subscription friction (worst): "surreptitiously enrolled... exceedingly difficult and unnecessarily confusing... dark patterns." (Class action complaint, Hoke v. AG1.) "AG1 does not have a one- click cancel button in the member portal, and cancellation requires contacting customer support via chat or email."

- Taste fatigue / reformulation mishap: "AG1 just changed the formula and there is a strange bitter after taste." "The taste of the new formula is not nearly as good IMO. The taste is one of the biggest reasons my wife and I buy ag1."
- Didn't feel anything: "Did I feel any difference when I stopped? No." "It doesn't do much. I didn't exactly notice a difference after a month."
- GI distress: "I had some mild GI issues during the first month." "I was excited to try it, but it upset my stomach. I gifted it to a friend." (Pam E.)
- Stretching pattern (pre-churn): "I typically drink it a few days a week" / "make one bag last 2–3 months."
- Customer service told them to stop: "I contacted support and they said everyone is different, if it does that to me, I should quit taking it." (Pam E.)

The critique infrastructure (Aonic can ride the wake without naming names):

Bryan Johnson (Jan 2025 public takedown):

- "AG1 is one of the lowest value health products in the world despite being the most heavily promoted."
- "AG1 has no real product substance and is fundamentally an influencer heist." [FLAG: capture, don't repeat.]
- "Two simple alternatives, 75% and 56% less expensive, outperform AG1 in randomized clinical trials."
- "The health benefits of AG1 are worth $30, max."
- "pixie dusting" — his term for undersized doses; widely repeated.

Journalist / expert critique (Fortune, Boston Globe, McGill, NY Magazine):

- Rhonda Patrick: "AG1 is nothing more than an expensive multivitamin."
- Derek Beres: "one of the most egregious players in the space."
- Charlotte Martin, dietitian: "you're getting pretty insignificant amounts of these individual ingredients."
- Scott Carney: "They're selling an idea of health... Do they deliver? Not scientifically."
- Maddie Pasquariello, dietitian: "Ingredients that they're claiming are the active ingredient in the product are often included at sub-clinical values, meaning there will be no benefit."
- Jonathan Jarry, McGill: "it throws into the mix a boatload of unproven ingredients that are trendy in wellness circles." "AG1 is right for everyone, apparently, 'just in case'."

"AG1 is a marketing company" cluster:

- "AG1 is not a product company, it's a marketing company." — Synergy Startup Substack. (THE single most copy-actionable line in the entire research corpus.)
- "It's been said that the company pays Joe Rogan $10 million per year and Andrew Huberman $2 million."
- "AG1 spend[s] approximately $2.2 million per month on podcast ads." — Marketing Brew. <https://www.marketingbrew.com/stories/2022/09/15/athletic-greens-gives-us-the-scoop-on-its-podcast-advertising-strategy>
- "AG1 charges $99 a month for something that costs them less than $5 per serving to produce, representing a 1800% markup."

Proprietary blend / dosing critique:

- "AG1 simply uses far too many ingredients and hides behind a proprietary blend. Almost none of them can be effectively dosed." — Nutri.it.com.
- "this lack of transparency makes it very hard to assess if the products truly help." — Wellness Daddy.
- "AG1 explicitly does not include vitamin D — the single most common deficiency in populations most likely to buy AG1." — ConsumerLab.

Switching stories — "I switched from AG1 to ____":

- "I've been choking on Athletic Greens for the last few years and am glad those days are over. I look forward to taking [the alternative] every day not only because they taste great but also because I know they're good for me." — Grüns customer testimonial. ("Choking on" is gold.)
- "This is the greens powder that officially made me break up with AG1. Live it Up makes the whole ritual feel easy and enjoyable." — The Quality Edit.
- "Our family took Athletic Greens for a few years; but always wondered, 'Is the product really good or are they really good at marketing?' We decided it was the marketing and switched to Tonik." — Supergreen Tonik testimonial.
- "AG1 was a bit too gritty and earthy for me. tasted like blended vegetables mixed with dirt. Huel is by far the best greens powder I've tried." — My Subscription Addiction switcher.
- "I switched from AG1 to Live It Up Greens about 8 months ago and I like it much better." — verified-reviews.com.
- "Cancelled after three months. Not because it didn't work — I genuinely felt better. Because the annual math hit me: $1,188 a year for something I could approximate with a single greens powder for $300-360." — r/Supplements via Useful Vitamins. (THE iconic switching quote.)

G2. Tier-2 competitor teardown (compact)

See Section 6 (Competitive Teardown Table) for the matrix view. Below: the angle Aonic can drive against each.

Ritual: Loved for minimalism / "only 8 ingredients I can pronounce." Vulnerable to "doesn't have enough in it" (Healthline dietitian — Ritual is missing Vitamin C, calcium, has only 30 mg magnesium vs 310-320 mg RDA). Also: "fishy burps," subscription billing complaints (BBB, Trustpilot), and "this product is a waste of money. i used it for 2 months with no results. feeling scammed by their big promises." (Daily Health Supplement.) Aonic wedge: Comprehensive without the burp.

Huel Daily Greens: Loved for vegan / brand-halo / taste-relative-to-AG1. Killed by absolute taste verdicts ("pond water with chemical sweetener," "horse poo," "horrible bitter Stevia aftertaste," "chalky, gritty texture makes it feel like a chore"). Aonic wedge: We didn't accidentally call our greens powder "pond water" — and we don't use stevia like that.

Bloom Greens: Loved by TikTok discovery audience; brand-loyalists call it a daily ritual. Killed by potency callouts ("Bloom is a SCAM. At only 1,367mg per greens serving, I am shocked they call themselves a greens powder. Ingredients mean nothing if potency isn't considered!" @consciouslykay TikTok), GI distress reviews on Amazon, and influencer-disclosure controversies (Daily Dot's reporting on undisclosed influencer pay). Aonic wedge: Real doses, not marketing doses.

Live It Up Super Greens: Already positioned as "the AG1 alternative." Praised for "sweet, minty, zero bitterness." Killed by mixing issues ("clings to your scoop, hand, and the bag due to its fine texture, which causes static electricity buildup") and modest 5-star praise ("do notice a better overall feeling when taken vs when not" — low intensity). Aonic wedge: Same value, more energy, real comprehensiveness.

Thorne Basic Nutrients 2/Day: Owns the clinical / serious-supplement crowd. Praised technically ("coenzyme versions of the entire B complex," "boron is a sweet bonus," "conservative zinc dosage that is also balanced by a little copper"). Killed by lukewarm felt-effect ("After taking it for close to two weeks, they do not feel too much of a difference") and "more expensive than competitors." Aonic wedge: Technical credibility AND a felt morning ritual.

Centrum / One A Day / Garden of Life (the legacy tier):

- Centrum loyalty is doctor-permission-based, not preference-based. The Pfizer + magnesium oxide + palm oil + dyes teardown is well-documented.
- One A Day is universally roasted in the modern voice — "neon yellow urine," "vitamin burps, a metallic aftertaste," "lodging in the esophagus."
- Garden of Life's RAW Prenatal smell complaints are vivid ("the capsules smell like vomit, and opening the bottle reveals a wiff of sour stink").

Aonic wedge against legacy tier: The multivitamin your doctor would actually recommend if they knew what's in your current one. (Compliance: do not claim doctor endorsement; let the customer infer.)

Amazing Grass / Organifi / Naked Greens (the price-tier greens):

- Amazing Grass: "Tastes like cigarette smoke," "like taking a big bite out of your lawn."
- Organifi: hair/nails/skin testimonials (FLAG: structure-function adjacent), "hefty price tag," "~$2.30 per scoop."
- Naked Greens: "The original is not good — just straight-up grass. The berry flavor is a bit better, but still very grassy."

Care/of (defunct June 2024): Forced migration audience. The personalization-disappointed ex-Care/of subscriber is actively shopping. "Find a replacement vitamin pack company after Care/of's closure" is live search intent.

4. MASTER LANGUAGE BANK — 100+ verbatim phrases, categorized

4A. PROBLEM LANGUAGE (current-state pain)

Energy / fatigue / "tired but wired"

6. "I sleep like a log" — Kate N., Mpowder
7. "My usual 3 PM energy crash? Gone. Post-meal bloating? Significantly reduced." — Fab Fit Mommy
8. "My usual post-meal bloat? Gone. I realized I hadn't reached for my emergency Gas-X in weeks" — Fab Fit Mommy
9. "No more 3 PM crash followed by reaching for my fourth coffee. My energy felt more... even" — Fab Fit Mommy
10. "Did it cure my perimenopause symptoms? No. Did it make me feel more equipped to handle them? Absolutely." — Fab Fit Mommy (THE compliance-clean outcome construction)
11. "It became my morning anchor. I actually craved that earthy taste because my body associated it with feeling better" — Fab Fit Mommy
12. "after six months, I'm still taking AG1 daily. Not because I'm obsessed with it, but because it consistently makes me feel better than when I don't take it" — Fab Fit Mommy
13. "the easiest health habits I've ever maintained" — Chris Freytag, AG1 3-yr
14. "something I genuinely look forward to each morning" — Chris Freytag
15. "That simplicity is exactly why I've been able to stay consistent with it for years" — Chris Freytag
16. "This ritual gives me focus and clarity for the day" — Sanja, AG1 3-yr [Note: "focus" is a Aonic compliance flag — use "Brain Health & Function"]
17. "I take it as a nutritional safety net" — Trail and Kale

18. "It helps me feel like I've already done something good for my body before coffee" — Trail and Kale
19. "I know my body is consistently supported" — Patrizia
20. "feel awake, healthy, and well-prepared to juggle the demands of parenting and work" — Mike R.
21. "ready to face whatever comes my way" — Mike R.
22. "I have energy, focus and feel generally great. I believe I complete tasks and navigate each day like people 20+ years younger" — Stuart W. [FLAG: "20 years younger" risky]
23. "covered" — universal outcome word
24. "covers all of your foundational nutritional needs" — Huberman (note: this is the Aonic-adjacent phrase that drew the most scrutiny; avoid mirroring exactly)
25. "It's not a replacement for food — it's a safety net" — Reddit r/Supplements
26. "An insurance policy for your health" — Reddit consensus
27. "It's great to know that you can get it all from one thing" — Healthline tester (the one-bottle outcome)
28. "I went from eight pills every morning to one delicious drink" — comparemaniac.com switcher
29. "more regular digestion with no bloating or 'heaviness'" — Live It Up
30. "better, got sick less often, and had more consistent energy throughout the day" — Reddit vitamin D
31. "I'd cleaned my mental windshield" — Reddit omega-3
32. "healthy habits tend to multiply" — Stacie Hassing, Real Food Dietitians
33. "I want to be the guy who's hiking with my grandkids at 75, not the guy in a recliner" — iHerb

4C. COMPETITOR-SPECIFIC LANGUAGE BANK

AG1-specific (the loyalty mechanism Aonic must replace)

1. "I have been using AG1 for at least 5 years" — Andrea B.
2. "I have religiously taken it nearly every day since then" — Ashley Miller Daniels
3. "I've actually been able to stop using several other supplements because the dosage in AG1 is sufficient" — Annie SL
4. "I love the flavor and the ease and simplicity with which I ingest it every morning" — Stuart W.

AG1-specific (the churn / critique language Aonic should ride)

1. "AG1 is not a product company, it's a marketing company" — Synergy Startup
2. "influencer heist" — Bryan Johnson [FLAG: capture only]
3. "Save your greenbacks" — Kato Train Me Please
4. "this is a $99/mo subscription dressed up as a wellness ritual" — Composite signal across sources
5. "AG1 explicitly does not include vitamin D" — ConsumerLab

Ritual-specific

1. "Love the fact that these vitamins don't contain a bunch of ingredients that I can't pronounce" — Ritual customer
2. "the only vitamin I've stuck to" — Ritual aggregated praise

3. "for skeptics, by skeptics" — Ritual's own tagline that customers reference
4. "this product is a waste of money. i used it for 2 months with no results" — Ritual complaint
5. "fishy burps that burned their throat" — Ritual complaint

Huel-specific

1. "taste comparisons of greens products is a low bar starting point" — Huel forum Phil_C (a universal customer truth)
2. "I feel as good as I did with the AG1" — Huel switcher
3. "taste is 100x better" — Huel switcher

Thorne-specific

1. "It's almost perfect as a cover-your-bases approach" — LongeCity dosquito
2. "Thorne 2/day is clean and my preferred basic multivitamin" — LongeCity baccheion
3. "coenzyme versions of the entire B complex" — Reddit r/Supplements on Thorne
4. "boron is a sweet bonus" — LongeCity

Centrum / legacy multivitamin

1. "I've taken Centrum Silver (over 50) for several years as recommended by my doctor" — Drugs.com
2. "Centrum is made by Pfizer and uses synthetic vitamin E and beta carotene, the oxide form of magnesium which only 4% is absorbed, hydrogenated palm oil, and artificial colors" — HumanTonik
3. "There is not enough B complex in it to help" — Bodybuilding.com

Bloom-specific

1. "Bloom is a SCAM. At only 1,367mg per greens serving" — @consciouslykay [FLAG: do not echo "scam"]
2. "Gabi, can you tell us what that powder you always put in the water is for?" — TikTok comment (the discovery-pattern voice)

Live It Up-specific

1. "I switched from AG1 to Live It Up Greens about 8 months ago and I like it much better" — verified-reviews
2. "sweet, minty, zero bitterness" — Live It Up positioning customers echo

Care/of-specific (the migration audience)

1. "Please please please figure something out! This makes me so sad!" — Care/of customer at shutdown

4D. INFLUENCER / CREATOR-DRIVEN LANGUAGE (last 12 months)

1. "cortisol cocktail" — Meagan, Tamsen Fadal

2. "We Do Not Care Club" — @justbeingmelani
3. "Mary Claire Haver Obgyn Magnesium L Threonate" (trending tag)
4. "After 40, women lose muscle mass at an accelerated rate" — Mary Claire Haver
5. "healthspan vs lifespan" — Peter Attia
6. "stack" (now universal vocabulary)
7. "foundational" (Mary Claire Haver coinage)
8. "What I take every morning" (the genre)

5. COMPETITIVE TEARDOWN TABLE

Competitor	Main on-pack claim	Primary differentiator	Top 1-star complaint (verbatim)	Top 5-star praise (verbatim)	Price/ serving	Aonic wedge
AG1 (Athletic Greens)	"Foundational nutrition. Daily greens, vitamins, minerals, probiotics."	The morning-ritual brand + podcast saturation	"Did I feel any difference when I stopped? No." (Ashley Miller Daniels) / "$1,188 a year" (multiple)	"This ritual gives me focus and clarity for the day." (Sanja, 3-yr) / "the easiest health habits I've ever maintained" (Chris Freytag)	$79 (sub) – $99 (one-time) / 30 servings = $2.63 – $3.30/day	Same morning ritual without the marketing tax; transparent doses, no proprietary blend, easy cancel, vitamin D included
Ritual (Essential)	"Bring Your Foundational Health Into Focus." / "For Skeptics, By Skeptics."	Minimalism (9 ingredients), patented delayed-release capsule, traceability	"this product is a waste of money. i used it for 2 months with no results." / "horrible fish burps that would not stop for so many hours"	"Love the fact that these vitamins don't contain a bunch of ingredients that I can't pronounce." / "the only vitamin I've stuck to."	$24.75 / 30 = $0.83/day	Comprehensive without the burp; the foundations Ritual leaves out without losing transparency

Huel Daily Greens	"A Supergreens powder that tastes good " / "Grown by nature, blended by science."	Taste-first greens, brand-halo from Huel meal-replacement	"pond water someone left an apple in with mushrooms growing around the edges" / "horrible bitter Stevia aftertaste"	"I feel as good as I did with the AG1." / "taste is 100x better"	~€1.67 / ~$1.85 per serving	Taste without stevia tradeoffs; foundational coverage that's a daily ritual, not a meal-replacement adjacency
Bloom Greens	"BLOOM INTO YOUR BEST SELF™" / "relieve bloat, support digestion, promote energy"	Influencer-driven, taste-first, affordability	"every time I get a bad headache and crazy bloating, stomach cramping" / "Bloom is a SCAM. At only 1,367mg per greens serving"	"I honestly don't know where this product has been all my life! I now use this daily because I struggle with bloating."	$33.99 / 30 = $1.13/day	Real doses, not marketing doses; coverage that targets the underlying cause, not just the surface symptom
Live It Up Super Greens	"20+ all-natural superfood ingredients, 5 billion CFUs of dairy-free probiotics, digestive enzyme blend"	Price-to-value vs. AG1; third-party tested; no required subscription	"clings to your scoop, hand, and the bag" (texture/ mixing)	"I switched from AG1 to Live It Up Greens about 8 months ago and I like it much better"	~$2.00/day	Same affordability angle, broader foundational coverage (vitamins + minerals + adaptogens, not just greens)

Thorne Basic Nutrients 2/Day	"Foundational support for heart, brain, nerve, immune, bone, and skin health." / "#1 recommended clinical brand by health-care practitioners"	Clinical credibility, NSF Certified for Sport, methylated B-complex	"After taking it for close to two weeks, they do not feel too much of a difference" / "a stinging smell that can be quite pungent"	"It's almost perfect as a cover-your-bases approach." / "Thorne 2/day is clean and my preferred basic multivitamin."	$36 / 30 = $1.20/day (NSF)	Same technical credibility + a felt morning ritual; foundational coverage that includes greens and adaptogens, not just multi
Centrum / One A Day (legacy)	"Complete multivitamin ... with key nutrients for energy, immunity, and metabolism"	Doctor-mentioned baseline; mass retail	"there is not enough B complex in it to help" / "Within an hour of taking it, urine turns a radioactive, neon yellow" / "vitamin burps, a metallic aftertaste"	"I've taken Centrum Silver for years. No problems."	$0.10 – $0.30/day	The upgrade your doctor would actually recommend if they knew you were taking magnesium oxide that's 4% absorbed

(Tertiary tier — Amazing Grass, Organifi, Naked Greens, Garden of Life, Care/of, Persona — see Sections 2-3 above for verbatim teardowns.)

6. TRIGGER EVENT TIMELINE

T-minus 12+ months — Slow drift: Mid-thirties to early forties. Increasing fatigue, sleep disturbance, "running on fumes." Occasionally buys a single supplement (vitamin D, magnesium) but doesn't stick with it. "I'd been getting easily emotional over the last 4 or so years." (Andrea Marsh.)

T-minus 6-12 months — First sharp signal: One of the following.

- Bloodwork shocks: Doctor says vitamin D is 18 ng/mL, or homocysteine is high, or B12 is low.
- A peer event: Spouse, sibling, friend, or parent has a cardiac event, cancer diagnosis, or "I-feel-different" milestone birthday.
- A creator video lands at the right moment: Drew Barrymore on heavy periods. Mary Claire Haver on creatine for women over 40. Peter Attia on healthspan. Stacy Sims on perimenopause timing.
- A perimenopause symptom cluster (Chloe): Brain fog + first hot flash + rage + period irregularity, often condensed into a single bad week.

T-minus 3-6 months — Active research: They Google. They watch YouTube reviews. They TikTok-scroll perimenopause or biohacking content. They read AG1 reviews and recoil at $99/month. They land in Mumsnet, Reddit, Trustpilot, comment sections.

T-minus 1-3 months — First product trial: Often Ritual (Chloe under 40), Centrum (over 50), AG1 (if affordability allows), or "I added a magnesium and a D3." They expect to "feel different" within two weeks.

T-minus 0-30 days — Disappointment OR conversion: This is where most products lose. "After two weeks I didn't feel anything." "It made me sick to my stomach." "I started forgetting to take them." OR — for the converts — "I felt something." / "My usual 3 PM energy crash? Gone." / "It became my morning anchor."

T+30-90 days — The price math hits: "$1,188 a year for something I could approximate." This is when AG1 churn happens. Also when the "I gave up" cohort gives up.

T+90-365 days — The loyalist cohort solidifies: "the easiest health habit I've ever maintained." "I feel off when I skip it." These are the customers who become 3+ year loyalists.

Seasonality: January (resolutions, post-holiday reset) and August-October (back-to-school for Chloe, pre-winter immunity priming) are the strongest entry points.

7. COMPLIANCE FLAGS

Aonic copy must NOT echo the following customer-voice language, even though it appears verbatim in the research corpus. Safer reframes are listed.

Tempting language captured	Where it appeared	Why it's risky	Safer Aonic frame
"Big Pharma is hiding the cure" / "Centrum is Big Pharma"	HumanTonik vs. Centrum; absent in other sources	Conspiracy framing; FTC/FDA scrutiny	Factual ingredient teardown: magnesium oxide vs. magnesium glycinate, synthetic vs. methylated forms, FD&C dyes vs. no dyes — let the comparison speak
"Clinically effective"	Ritual claim; Thorne practitioner positioning	Specific FDA-flagged phrase	"Clinically studied dosages" — Aonic's house style
"Cures / treats / prevents"	Customer testimonials say variants ("Menopace ended my anxiety," "ended my...")	Disease claim	"Supports" / "Helps support" — structure/function language

"Balance hormones" / "fix hormones"	TikTok perimenopause discourse, Mumsnet	FTC has actioned this phrase	"Supports your daily hormonal health" — structure/function only; or just don't claim hormonal benefit at all
"Focus" as a benefit word	AG1, Thorne, Live It Up reviews	Aonic uses "Brain Health & Function"	"Supports Brain Health & Function"
"Immunity" / "immune system support" framed as boost	AG1, Live It Up, Bloom	Aonic uses "Immune Support"	"Immune Support"
"Money-back guarantee"	None of the competitors prominently feature, but expected by customers	Aonic does not offer refunds	Do not promise. Lead with first-month try-and-keep-it-simple messaging that doesn't reference guarantee
"Made in USA" alone	Not surfaced in customer voice but is an industry shortcut	Aonic copy uses "Made in the USA with globally sourced ingredients"	Use the full phrase — and lean on it competitively, since AG1 is made in New Zealand
"No added sugar"	Common across greens reviews	Aonic copy uses "Zero grams added sugar"	Use Aonic's exact phrasing
"Scam" / "well-marketed scam" (about a named competitor)	Bryan Johnson, Biohackers Protocol, Aparna Jain, @consciouslykay TikTok	Naming a named competitor as a "scam" is actionable	Borrow the spirit, not the word. "You shouldn't have to pay $99/month for ingredients you can see." "We didn't put our budget into podcast ads."
"Influencer heist"	Bryan Johnson	Same — Johnson is the speaker, re quoting in copy is risky	"We're not a podcast ad."
Heavy metals / lead / Prop 65 callouts vs. AG1 specifically	Multiple critic blogs, Previnex, Dr. Tricia O'Brien MD	Lead-content marketing is a litigated category; Prop 65 nuance is misunderstood; risk of false-light claims	Substantiate Aonic's own "third-party tested, no proprietary blend, clinically studied dosages" without attacking competitors on metals
"AG1 is overpriced/undersourced"	Bryan Johnson, McGill OSS, Fortune	Better to imply via Aonic's transparency than to claim it about a named competitor	"Every dosage on our label. Every ingredient sourced and tested. Every month."

"Cut the risk of another heart attack by 50%"	Euronews framing of vitamin D study	Disease prevention claim	Do not echo. Stick to "Supports cardiovascular health" or skip cardiovascular framing entirely
"Slowing the progression of chronic conditions"	gethealthspan.com	Disease claim	Do not echo
"20 years younger" / "felt like superwoman" / "felt like a whole new person"	AG1 customer Stuart W., Midi testimonial	Transformative-cure tone — fine as legitimate customer review if obtained properly, risky as brand-voice headline	Use legitimate testimonials with proper consent and disclaimers; do not write headlines in this tone
"I am getting Alzheimer's" (customer-voice fear)	Stella perimenopause story	Disease language	Capture as customer voice in editorial content; do not echo in product copy
"Hormone therapy changed everything for me"	Mary Claire Haver	Therapy claim — fine for an MD, risky for a supplement brand to mirror	Don't speak to HRT in Aonic copy unless legally cleared
"Hair / nails / skin" beauty claims	Organifi customer Quote 101	Structure/function adjacent	Frame as customer story not Aonic claim. Or skip
"Kicks off my metabolism"	Live It Up customer	Structure-function adjacent	Customer-voice quote only — do not echo

Safer outcome verbs the data validates: supports, helps, contributes to, enables, makes me feel more equipped, covers, sets up. All used by customers; all defensible.

Compliance MVP construction (from the data): "Did it cure my [symptom]? No. Did it make me feel more equipped to handle [day / life / week / morning]? Absolutely." (Fab Fit Mommy.) This is the model construction Aonic copy should mirror.

9. CLOSING NOTES FOR THE COPYWRITER

The single most copy-actionable line in this entire research corpus: "AG1 is not a product company, it's a marketing company." (Synergy Startup Substack.) Build a campaign around the inverse — We're a product. Read the label.

The single most copy-actionable price quote: "Cancelled after three months. Not because it didn't work — I genuinely felt better. Because the annual math hit me: $1,188 a year for something I could approximate with a single greens powder for $300-360."

The single most copy-actionable persona insight: "Drawer full of half-empty bottles" / "kitchen counter pharmacy" is universal across Ben, Chloe, and the healthspan buyer. It is the cleanest cross-persona positioning anchor. Industry has now named the pain: pill fatigue. Own it.

The compliance-clean outcome construction to mirror: "Did it cure my [problem]? No. Did it make me feel more equipped to handle [day / week / life]? Absolutely." (Fab Fit Mommy AG1 review.)

The loyalty mechanism to install (replacing AG1's): Not "felt different." It's covered + safety net + ritual. "It's a good foundational habit." "I take it as a nutritional safety net." "It helps me feel like I've already done something good for my body before coffee." "This ritual gives me focus and clarity for the day." (Compliance note: "focus" → "Brain Health & Function" in Aonic copy.)

The hostile-witness summary on AG1:

- They keep loyalists for the ritual, not the ingredients. ("I have religiously taken it nearly every day since then.")
- They lose them at annualized math + subscription friction. ("$1,188 a year" + "exceedingly difficult and unnecessarily confusing" cancel flow.)
- Their critics call them a marketing company, not a product company — and the critic infrastructure is mature (Bryan Johnson, McGill, Boston Globe, Fortune, class action, NY Magazine, Substack ecosystem).
- The proprietary-blend critique is specific and copy-actionable: AG1 doesn't disclose dosages, doesn't include vitamin D, uses cyanocobalamin (cheap B12), is "pixie-dusted." Aonic Complete's transparency, vitamin D inclusion, methylated-form story, and stated-dose-per-ingredient policy is the contrast.

Final note on quote fidelity: Reddit was not directly accessible in this environment. Where Reddit voice appears, it is sourced via reputable aggregator articles with subreddit + (often) username + date attribution, or via demographically-equivalent forums (Mumsnet, Patient.info, LongeCity, BobIsTheOilGuy, Drugs.com). If Reddit-native verbatim is required for production copy, recommend a second mining pass with a Reddit-API-equipped tool (PullPush, Pushshift, or equivalent) targeting r/AG1, r/Supplements, r/XXFitness, r/Perimenopause, r/Biohackers, and r/PeterAttia. The verbatim landscape captured above is more than sufficient for first-draft copy.
